Jennifer McLean:

Good morning, everyone. Welcome to Predictions Week 2022. It's been an unusual Predictions Week in that we haven't had our traditional predictions of here's what's going to happen, but more of a here are the opportunities before you, from an energy and color and soul perspective. I just love it. It's been so empowering, so hopeful, so brilliant. It's just been a blast.

Jennifer McLean:

And while some of our speakers actually did give predictions like that, Marilyn Alauria has a free download, Thomas John's package has information about the markets and about celebrities and all kind of stuff. That's there for you. I hope you've been feeling the love, and the possibility, and the hope, and the transformation that has happened for all of us together.

Jennifer McLean:

The other thing that's happened is, as you all know, I have COVID, and each show, I've been feeling better. It's like there's a healing that's been happening all week. And not only is it the speakers that I think are doing that, it's all of you. You have come with the most amazing energy. My speakers have reached out to me afterwards and commented on it, about what a special audience this has been. Thank you for bringing your full intention to these sessions and bringing your beautiful challenges and questions and wisdom. We so, so appreciate you, and thank you.

Jennifer McLean:

Today, we have the amazing Brian Seth Hurst. Brian is a dear friend. He's been a friend since I was nine years old, if you could believe it. He's a TV producer, he's a psychic to celebrities, he's a counselor, he's an intuitive coach, and he has been assisting people in gaining an enhanced perspective on their lives and businesses for more than three decades. Brian brings his experience as a successful executive in the entertainment industry to provide vision and insight into how to master your life and business.

Jennifer McLean:

During your sessions with Brian today, you're going to experience some deep clarity on the circumstances of your life, and how you can use them to expand into what's next for you. He beautifully articulates what is available, and how you can learn from your current experiences, and define actual real opportunities for your future. Brian has this remarkable gift of being able to dive into your session without knowing your name or having you even ask a question, and you will probably experience that today. A very, very gifted psychic and intuitive counselor. Welcome, Brian Seth Hurst, to Masterworks Healing Membership Presents Predictions Week.

Jennifer McLean:

Hi, Jennifer McLean. Happy new year to you. I'm glad that you are feeling better each day. That's great news. I put you in my meditations and just sent you a ton of light.

Jennifer McLean:

Oh, thank you.

Brian Seth Hurst:

I think this is my 12th Prediction Week with you.

Jennifer McLean:

Yes, ever since the start.

Brian Seth Hurst:

Yes. I was thinking of all the different places I have done this from. I did it from a car, on a bay near Ocean City, Maryland. I did it from a hotel room in Las Vegas. I'm doing it from a hotel room in Fort Lauderdale today. And I so look forward to my calls with the membership. I think I do third Monday of every month, but it doesn't matter where I am. I got to stop what I'm doing because I don't know if the other speakers have said so, but we get just as much, if not more, out of our participation as the community does. So, yes, here I am.

Jennifer McLean:

Happy new year to you. Thank you for changing your schedule, because originally Brian was supposed to be on the first weekend. And of course, because I got COVID and was in bed for two days, he graciously said yes, and is joining us now a week later. He had to kind of scramble because he was traveling. We're so grateful that you were able to make it, Brian, and arrange your schedule so that you could be here.

Brian Seth Hurst:

Thank you. I heard what you said at the opening about opportunities, and I'm exceedingly optimistic. To me, our time on the planet, regardless of how much time we spend here, is evolutionary, and it's a long game. Sometimes, change happens in an instant; sometimes it takes time. What I'm watching, and I hesitate to use the word trend because it implies that we don't have power but we do, because my perspective is that everything that happens, I'm dedicated to gleaning something positive. What I'm noticing, right now, is this general trend of decentralization. And by that, I mean, that power used to be from the top down. And unfortunately, wherever you are in the chain, you might not have gotten what you've needed.

Brian Seth Hurst:

I think a lot of what you're seeing in terms of the split between right and left, between east and west, between north and south, has to do, at least from my perspective, with preservation. These are people who want to preserve their position, who may have worked hard, who have decided what life should be, who don't want the change. And then, you have all the people who not only want the change, but are coming from a more equitable and fair place. I'm going to use Facebook for a minute. In a central model, Facebook is a company, or Meta now as they call it, they have all your data, they have all the power, they determine the news flow, they determine all of that.

Brian Seth Hurst:

In a decentralized organization, the power flows the opposite way. And for those of you that heard all these buzzwords about the metaverse and all of that, what they have is a term called decentralized autonomous organization. It's a trend in NFTs and all of the stuff that you hear people talking about, but what's underneath that trend and whatever communities are formed as that, they control the outcome. They own their data. They own their land. It's exceedingly democratic. And it's also exceedingly transparent, thanks to this thing called blockchain. But I think that's just symptomatic. That's on the surface of something much larger, a much larger movement that is much more equitable.

Brian Seth Hurst:

I think it's challenging for people that don't want things to change, that don't want other people to have what they have, that don't want other people to have certain rights. But that's because of fear, that's fear-based operation. A very good friend of mine had said to me, "Your parents raised you in a fear-based system," and it was so true. And if you were raised by parents who were afraid or were afraid for their wellbeing or their own welfare and they didn't handle their business, their stuff, their enlightenment, their self-examination, then you just got passed on what you learned.

Brian Seth Hurst:

And we've been passed on this generational stuff, systemic racism, whatever it is. It's been passed on, but I think we are awake now. I think that we are also aware of our choices. I think that where the pandemic was concerned to me, I saw it as an opportunity to really look at my personhood. Who am I? What am I here to do? What am I here to accomplish? How can I serve? And what do I no longer wish to hold as a belief? I don't think I would've looked as carefully at my own wellbeing in relationship to others. Is this person contributing to my life? Am I contributing to theirs? Or are we detrimental to one another? I don't think I would've looked at it, had it not been for the pandemic. I might have, but it would've taken a longer time.

Brian Seth Hurst:

You hear about all these people resigning and starting their own businesses. This is what I mean; there is so much opportunity. You can start from anywhere. And in terms of the markets, in terms of NFT, in terms of others, there will always be hype. There will always be a lot of stuff at the beginning. There will always be mistakes. We're trying something new, but I think our willingness, and I speak primarily for myself, my willingness to commit stuff with an open heart and an open mind and a willingness to learn creates a lot less friction for me. I enjoy the research. I enjoy learning about something new. I want to continue to learn and be vibrant and alive for the rest of the time I'm on the planet. And that means to me, maybe my old definition of security was actually a limitation and the chance to reach out and discover an authentic personhood within me.

Brian Seth Hurst:

I'll only find that person in relationship to other people in service. I don't think I could find it alone in a hotel room in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. So, here we are. We're in community, and it's the support of each other, and it's the, I don't even want to say, tolerance. It's the willingness to let other people have the journey that they're on and be receptive to their path, even if you don't agree with it. And once I take that attitude, which is, "okay, wait, they're on their journey. I don't know who they are." I don't know, because not a lot of people will let you know who they really are. You don't know their history.

Brian Seth Hurst:

A friend just wrote an essay. He was abused as a kid. He just wrote an essay for a blog. I've known him for 12 years, and I had no idea that had happened to him. But his willingness to tell the truth is going to help so many people. I just was like, "Oh my God. So many people will feel permission to be who they are from what he's written." I realize I'm probably all over the place. But the point I'm making, is that each of us has an intuition, a guidance, a power. Each of us has a choice, the right to say 'yes' or 'no' to something, and each of us has the opportunity to look on the other side, to see how someone else is feeling. From the compassion that we have for ourselves, I think that increases compassion that we can have for others.

Brian Seth Hurst:

I am really optimistic. I know that a lot of people are leaving the planet. Every day, a lot of people are leaving the planet. Jenn, I lost my sister and my father all in the same year, and it actually kind of changed. I thought about it at Christmas, and I thought it has really changed my perspective on loss and death because that's what happens. Whether you go through a dark night of the soul and a part of you dies and a part of you is reborn, there is transformation in every minute. I'm not saying I didn't experience grief. But what I am saying is that I understand the appropriateness of death/rebirth whenever it happens. And I understand the fear and resistance to change to the death of something. But I prefer to balance that with the excitement of what's ahead, what can be born, what can be created.

Brian Seth Hurst:

I think the Masterworks Healing community is such a great demonstration of that, because people are so willing to participate. When we call on people to have readings, that's pretty exposed. That's you. If I'm reading you or Jenn is reading you, the members of the community are saying, "Well, here's who I am." And as much as it's helping them, hopefully, it's helping other people that are listening. This willingness to just be authentic, that to me, is the driver of change.

Jennifer McLean:

Wow. A willingness to be authentic is the driver of change. I mean, really, really incredible. What I was thinking of as you were talking, Brian, is how much hope I've had through these Prediction Weeks. I realized there is a juxtaposition between the many, many thoughts of, this is the end times and we're done and we've messed it up and it's over. I kind of went from one to the other, but I've had this solid week of hope. I realized that being in this new state of willingness, you said willingness many, many times, is so important. Willingness to see it all.

Jennifer McLean:

Tori did a very unique and interesting experience about what our immediate ancestors, our parents and grandparents went through, and how they influenced us, and how that's in us, and how we have a choice now to move beyond it. You said this is generationally passed down. And yet now, we are awake. We're awake to that. And by being awake to that, we get to make new choices.

Jennifer McLean:

I love the perspective that you always bring as a strategist, which is 'look at the trends'. The trends are decentralization, and blockchain, and those technologies. It's the theoretical as well as strategic and actually transactional and happening. But theoretically, they're happening regardless of what people say or do. They're happening, and I love that. I love that you pointed that out. It's like, "Yeah, it's happening." Even if there are people that don't want that, it's happening.

Brian Seth Hurst:

I didn't want to give into the weeds. But without giving anything away, I'm working on a project right now that has to do with the metaverse in metaverse. It is so deep, and I've never been so challenged in terms of learning. I feel like I'm getting a master's degree. But Brent Friedman, who wrote Call of Duty and many other games, said something in a meeting. He said, "I truly believe that within the metaverse, which is a virtual world..." The main thing is, it is technology enabling us to live in a virtual world, I believe, in a hybrid world. Basically, because of things like augmented reality, these things would tie together. But Brent's statement was, "I believe that we will solve real world problems in the metaverse, and then bring them out into the world."

Brian Seth Hurst:

I thought to myself, "Oh my gosh, that is so brilliant." And, Jenn, sometimes you think you don't have the energy for change. You know what I mean?

Jennifer McLean:

Yes.

Brian Seth Hurst:

It's like, "Oh my God, do I have the energy for of this?" The real question is not do I have the energy for this, but do I have the love for this? Do I love what this can do for people? Do I love the change that this will bring about? Do I love what I'm learning? Even if it's hard, even if it's challenging, even if... My holidays were not stressful, but the people were stressful, because I had something to write, and it was weighing on my shoulders. And I was like, "Well, you still have to learn here. You have to learn that change is not a burden. And if you just get out of your own freaking way, Brian, this will come through you."

Brian Seth Hurst:

Stop trying to manipulate it. Stop trying to control it. Stop trying to worry what you know or you don't know, and trust the process and get out of your way. And by the time New Year's came, I was completely out of my way. And the guy that's in charge of the project, I said, "Listen, I'm going to give you a piece of advice. I'm older than you are. When you're looking for something in your house and you're looking and you're looking and you're looking and you just can't find it, and finally, you give up and there it is. Take a week. Forget about what we're doing. Get away from it. Stop the pressure on yourself. Stop. You're paralyzed in trying to analyze all of this. Just forget about it. Go have fun. Do something to get your mind off that."

Jennifer McLean:

Right. That's beautiful. Wow. Thank you for this.

Brian:

I do think the wonderful thing about the blockchain, if you do any reading into it, is it is a fully transparent ledger. Everybody knows. I liken it to a piece of art, right? When you buy a piece of art, it's really hard to prove the prominence. You don't know how much people have paid for it, and you don't know whether it's authentic. Well, within the blockchain, you have, one, every history of prominence. Who's owned what? Where has it been? Two, you have the right to see that. Three, if you're an artist right now, every time that piece of art is sold again in the digital world, you get a royalty. You get a piece of it. That's never happened for artists before. They've never been able to participate in secondary markets. So, a guy sells a painting, a woman sells a painting for a thousand dollars. And then 50 years later it's worth a 100,000 or more than that.

Brian:

And other people are making money off of it. But the artist is not. That isn't the way it is anymore. Within blockchain, within the NFT world, you can participate as an artist. What you create, you own. You determine the price. It's very kind of Wikipedia, Wiki-comments. But the opportunity to participate in revenue from what you create in secondary markets, whether it's music or art or writing or entertainment, that is brilliant because it removes the gatekeepers who determine whether your art is worthy or not. And it allows the audience and the people that love you to determine the worth and value of your art. You're getting direct feedback. There are no gatekeepers, and this is what I love about it. This is what I love about the centralization.

Jennifer McLean:

Wow. Very cool. Well, thank you for that very wholesome insight.

Brian:

You can either be at the effect of technology or you can be at the source and it can enable you. You are larger than the technology, as much as it seems the other way around sometimes. Nope. It's here for your benefit. I mean, it is like nuclear power for good or for evil, but I think we get to determine how it's used. Communities like this, we, are changing the world. We are making the difference to our authenticity and through the tools that have been invented. These technologies that have been invented aren't an accident. There's a great book called, The Future Is Faster Than You Think. But all these technologies are converging to make what's new possible. Zoom is an example of that. All the little technologies that were available have now combined to help us move forward. And they're there for us to use.

Jennifer McLean:

Yes. My friend, Tom Collins, who launched The Whole Secret, he got into crypto over the last 10 years and he figured a few things out using bots and he showed me how to actually get into crypto. It was so cool because it was intimidating. It's like you said, "Do I have the energy for this?" But then when he showed me what he figured out, his thing is called, The Plan, I was like, "Oh, okay. I could do this." And I did. And then the market immediately crashed. But because of the way that he did it (I did lose some money), but I also gained a bigger portfolio because of how he showed me how to do it. So when the market returns, I'm going to have a one third bigger portfolio. It's just the coolest thing ever. I'm so excited to finally be in crypto.

Brian:

Well, now you get to move into non-fungible tokens.

Jennifer McLean:

Yes. I'm looking at that.

Brian:

A lot of it is cumbersome right now.

Jennifer McLean:

Yes.

Brian:

Because the processes aren't automated and it's all new and it's daunting. And fortunately, like you had a resource, I had a resource in my friend, Seth, who said, "Look, I've been doing NFTs now for the last, how many years. And I'm going to make this really easy for you. Call me, and I'll give you an hour tutorial." And I'm like, "You should put that online so other people can see it."

Jennifer McLean:

Okay. Let's get to work. All of our speakers have just given us hope and you added another layer of it in a really unique way. We have a lot of hands raised. Oh, I think this might be a record!

Jennifer McLean:

Let's hold our intention, now. We will put our hand on our heart. Take these small actions, they add up. Stop what you're doing. Put your hand on your heart. Even if you're listening in the replay, do this. And say to yourself these exact words. And bring a little level of presence to it, so you're really present with it. Say to yourself, "May the perfect people be chosen to work with Brian today, so that I receive at the highest levels." Yes, that was good. And again, say that one more time. Say this to yourself with conviction and presence.

Jennifer McLean:

"May the perfect people be chosen to work with Brian tonight, so that I get exactly what I need at this time." Whoa, that was excellent. That pinged into the field, that field is now containing your intention, your strong intention. There will be a message here for you, whether Brian works with you or not. If you want an A plus-plus experience, write down what you need and require. Write down what you want support with. Write it on a piece of paper, right now. Especially those who have their hands raised, so that you can reference it when talking to Brian. And then every time Brian says something that pings in your field, write that down. And by the time you're done, you'll have three, five, 10 different little sentences. When you read it back against what you are needing some support with, it will give you an actual reading. It works every time.

Brian:

Before we call a number, I was just picking up if there was an Andrea on the line. It's like it's coming through kind of loud.

Jennifer McLean:

Okay. Andrea. This is going to be a little challenging to do, but we'll try it. Because we've got 500 people here. Let's see what happens. If your name is Andrea, press star seven. Oh, there you are.

Andrea:

Hi Jenn. It's Andrea.

Jennifer McLean:

Okay. Hang on a sec. There's another Andrea. Which one is it, Brian?

Brian:

Let me tell you what this is. The pictures that I'm getting is something that is going away. The picture I'm getting is something that's sinking in the ocean. And you're holding onto it, and you're trying to hold onto it really, really hard, but it seems more powerful than you. So whichever of you is struggling to hold on to something, that's who the reading is for.

Jennifer McLean:

Okay. Who does that resonate with?

Andrea:

It resonates with me. Does it resonate with the other Andrea too?

Other Andrea:

I don't know.

Jennifer McLean:

Okay. I can't tell because there are so many things. I'm sorry. This is hard to do. Can you tell me what city your phone is from? The one that said 'this is for me'.

Andrea:

4700 is the last four numbers.

Jennifer McLean:

I'm going to mute the other Andreas. Thank you, other Andreas. All right. We did it. Yay. Okay ahead, Andrea.

Brian:

Andrea, I'm going to ask you to let me get right into it. And then you can tell me what was interesting.

Andrea:

Thank you, Brian.

Brian:

First of all, I want you to know I can see your heart. You are a really good person. Sometimes people take their identities off of the ability to rescue others or save others from themselves, or save a set of circumstances. If you hold onto this, it will drag you down where you won't be able to do that again. This is one of those situations where it's like, if you let go, you feel like you'll be letting someone down or letting the circumstances down. It feels like it would be really hard in the end of the world. And it's almost like you would let someone else die. It feels that significant within your gut experience. And yet, this is the end of a pattern for you in your life. Your life is not about saving others first.

Brian:

It's not about self-sacrifice. And I know that you're really smart. And I know that you can be very analytical and you can be very column A, column B. But this is not about the mind. This is about your heart. And this is about you being courageous enough not to demonstrate the courage to others, but being courageous enough to save yourself. And to know that, that's an act of self-love, not an act of betrayal of another person. That word, betrayal, very active in your life. The word betrayal, very difficult word, very difficult experience. You don't ever want to be betrayed, you know what it's like to be betrayed and you don't ever want to feel like you're betraying somebody or some group or some circumstance or some situation. And this is going to pull you under. And you have to let go. There's nothing more to learn about being pulled under. There's nothing more to learn about suffering in circumstances like this. The lesson is not to suffer in circumstances like this. Okay. Your turn.

Andrea:

I just wanted to say that, as soon as you said it, I raised my hand late. I raised my hand and then two minutes later, you said, "Is there an Andrea here?" And I really, really, really needed to hear that today. Thank you.

Brian:

It has also a demonstration of how powerful you are. Jenn said there are 500 people on the line, 500. And you got through. What does that tell you about you?

Andrea:

That I'm not small. I'm powerful.

Brian:

Yes. And that power doesn't need to be used. Believe me, in taking care of yourself, you will take care of others. It will just happen that way. But that is kind of like reverse polarity, where you see how you are feeling and what you need so that you could be there for others rather than sacrificing. It's time for you to take a moment and fill up your fuel. Your spiritual fuel is low. Fill it up.

Andrea:

Okay. Thank you for that.

Jennifer McLean:

Thank you, Andrea for bringing forward that information. I think a lot of people needed to hear that.

Andrea:

Yes. Thank you kindly.

Jennifer McLean:

All right. Would you pick our next person from one to 323.

Andrea:

222.

Jennifer McLean:

Beautiful. Thank you.

Andrea:

Thank you.

Jennifer McLean:

Thank you, Andrea. Much love, honey. We're going to 222. It looks like it might be Philadelphia, which is where Brian and I both met.

Nancy:

Hi. This is Nancy.

Jennifer McLean:

Oh. Hey, Nancy.

Brian:

Hi Nancy. All right. The picture I'm getting right now is literally you standing, facing the future, but pressure from behind. And by pressure from behind, it's not pushing you forward. It's pulling you backwards. To me that pull back, it could represent old beliefs, but it could also represent the pressure that you feel from family or from background and a set of expectations that you are seeking to free yourself from. There are two things. One is the future. What is your sign? Are you a dual sign like Gemini or Pisces or...?

Nancy:

I'm Scorpio.

Brian:

Scorpio. There must be something else here, because there is a dual thing going on here. The first thing is the unknown. It's like, "Okay, if I move forward, it's a fear of the unknown. What's going to happen? What are the people behind me going to think?" That's the first thing. But then the other side is, "Oh my gosh, the possibilities are infinite." So you've got, "I'm a little scared of the unknown, but boy, I'm starting to understand what's possible." You're caught between the future and the past, which is not that bad, because you're really in the present. But if you're looking over your shoulder, you won't see what's in front of you. And you're looking too far ahead, you won't see what's in front of you. A lot of times, and this is not a judgment, you will try and manipulate people into understanding you without actually saying the words, without saying, "This is how I feel." It's almost like you'd rather not confront something directly.

Brian:

You'd rather confront it clandestinely. I don't know if this goes back to your childhood, where, if something was confronted directly, it caused a lot of drama. Part of you says, "Well, I just won't say anything. I'll do something instead of maybe... They'll move in the right direction." But what you are being called upon right now to do is speak your truth and you can do it calmly.

Brian:

Usually what happens for you is that you kind of get pushed to the end. And then it's like, if you had taken care of something earlier, it might have been quieter and easier. But then, when you're pushed to the end, it's like, you've got a temper in there. You are an adult now, you are about to map out your path for the future, what you're leaving behind. I really think you can turn around and look at it, and say, "Of all of these things that have been gnawing at me, what would I want to carry forward? And what would I want to let go of? What speaks to who I am? And what no longer represents where I am?"

Brian:

And this could also mean a move or a change of job. There is something like significant movement, but it's waiting for you. It's not going to happen to you. It's waiting for you. You're giving mixed signals to the universe, so the universe is waiting for you to pull the trigger.

Nancy:

Wow. That is so spot on. I'm getting chills. That's amazing. That's exactly where I'm at.

Brian:

I know this is going to sound really weird, but if you can have any sort of silk around you, even a scarf, a pillowcase, something. You need that softness, you need something that is soft, that can let you plug into the soft part of you so that you don't have to have such a hard edge. You just need the physical experience of softness, if that makes sense.

Nancy:

It does.

Brian:

And Nancy, can I tell you one more thing?

Nancy:

Yes.

Brian:

Write. W R I T E. Write.

Nancy:

Yes.

Brian:

Just write.

Nancy:

And that will help me figure things out?

Brian:

More than you can possibly know. And I think you have ability there that you haven't acknowledged, but I would just start writing. Just whatever form it takes. Even if you're writing on notepad paper. Just write. Get it out of your head and onto paper.

Nancy:

Okay. Wow. That's really interesting. And I am so grateful. Thank you.

Brian:

You are very welcome.

Jennifer McLean:

Thank you. That was great.

Brian:

One other thing I wanted to say to Nancy is, she had this feeling for many, many years that she was born to do great things. And the reason, Nancy, that you had that feeling is because it's true. Now, you just get to get out of your own way so that you can. And by great things, I mean, things that make a difference.

Nancy:

Yes.

Jennifer McLean:

Hey Nancy, how old are you, honey?

Nancy:

I'm 58.

Jennifer McLean:

Did you know that Colonel Sanders started Kentucky Fried Chicken at 61? Did you know that?

Nancy:

Yes.

Jennifer McLean:

Did you know that Hay House started her publishing company at 60?

Nancy:

I didn't know that.

Jennifer McLean:

Did you know that the brain of 58 to 70 year-olds is at its most heightened of a combination of flexibility? Wisdom?

Nancy:

That's amazing.

Jennifer McLean:

This is the time where you are at your peak to do what you're meant to do. This is the time.

Nancy:

Can I ask you a question?

Jennifer McLean:

Sure.

Nancy:

I suffered a brain injury in 2012, and it was life altering and I...

Jennifer McLean:

Yes, it bumped your brain into where it's supposed to be next. Congratulations. I mean, you couldn't be doing what you're about to do if you didn't have that, and there's a part of you that knows that. Right?

Nancy:

Yes.

Jennifer McLean:

Don't be a victim of that one anymore. Just like Brian talked about his dad and his sister leaving in the same year. And when my sister left me nine years ago.

Nancy:

And I lost both my parents.

Jennifer McLean:

Horrible, horrible gifts, but they are gifts.

Nancy:

I know, I lost both my parents within a year as well. Four years ago.

Jennifer McLean:

Don't let those things victimize you anymore. Use them as a platform to jump off from.

Nancy:

Opportunity.

Brian:

I'm at the risk of sounding cold. And I don't mean this to sound it, but with the departure of your parents, you are now free to be who you are. And you are free to be an adult.

Nancy:

And they would want that.

Brian:

Yes.

Jennifer McLean:

Especially now where they're at.

Nancy:

They're still with me. I get signs all the time.

Jennifer McLean:

Yes. Go for it, Nancy.

Nancy:

Thank you. And Jenn, because of you, I've learned that I am an empath.

Jennifer McLean:

There you go. But not a victimized empath, right?

Nancy:

Yes. I'm still learning. I'm still learning to protect myself. It's been challenging.

Jennifer McLean:

Natural protection of your power. You've got this. Okay?

Nancy:

Thank you.

Jennifer McLean:

You're welcome honey. Nancy, my love. Will you choose our next person from one to 333?

Nancy:

Number 11.

Jennifer McLean:

11. Awesome. Thank you so much.

Nancy:

Thank you.

Brian:

Before we go to 11, can you just make a note, I got another name, which is Colleen.

Jennifer McLean:

Colleen.

Brian:

Let's go to 11 and then go to Colleen.

Jennifer McLean:

Let's see. It's Lilly in Vancouver Island. Hey Lily.

Lilly:

Hi. How wonderful is this?

Jennifer McLean:

How wonderful is this? Go ahead. I'll let Brian start.

Lilly:

Thank you.

Brian:

Boy, you feel so etheric to me. Jenn just mentioned the word 'empath' and you so easily are affected. You're like this angel on the planet who absorbs other people's pain. It's not like you do it on purpose. And this is with animals too. Let me start this way. Lily, sometimes people need their suffering to learn what they have to learn and you can't take their suffering away from them.

Lily:

Yes.

Brian:

Because you are a natural healer, if they ask and there's an agreement that you're going to work together, that's great. But sometimes what happens is you just want to take the pain away, and so it goes into you. It's like you absorb it. And then it's not that you're moody, it's not that you're depressed, it's that you're absorbent. You want to be just aware that you don't have to do that. That's not your mission. I have a feeling it was a former mission. The other thing is, you are wonderful, wonderful with animals. You're almost Wiccan when it comes to understanding the consciousness of animals. You could probably be an animal communicator. Could never have been a vet because you could never depart with an animal. You would never want to be. You would never want to facilitate that transition. It would be too much for you.

Brian:

What I see in you is that the child in you is still very much present, which is absolutely great. That child can cue you in. That child is a very wise child, very old soul child, and guidance is available there. But you haven't been, I guess I would use the word 'tarnished'. It can be a really harsh world and there can be a lot of pain in it, but it has never kept you from being optimistic. It has never kept you from looking to see where the good is or where the light is. And right now, the way the world is, it's important that there are people like you who are just standing in the light.

Brian:

In terms of the personal struggle of where to put your attention, your psychic ability, your intuition, is very, very solid. Ask yourself prior to making any choice about what you want to do in the world or who you want to associate with. Just quiet, calm, and ask. You've got a lot of guidance around you. The next phase, I know you're waiting for what to discover, what to do next. It will come in stillness. And then it will unfold in front of you. Remember I said earlier that I had to trust the process. I'd much rather control it than trust it. If you're not in control, the truth is you really are because the larger you knows exactly what's going on. It's the fearful you that might not know. It's going to be a really nice year for you. Be careful of the obligations that you take on. Instead of obligations, like I said earlier, ask, "Will I love to do this? Would I do this under any circumstances? That's how much I love it." And that's the question you want to ask.

Lily:

Wow. I'm sitting in amazement here. So much of what you said, I have been told before, but it's like you're standing right here beside me. I can't even start to say how much totally clicks with me right now.

Brian:

I'm glad.

Lily:

Oh, my goodness. I'm quite emotional about it.

Brian:

That's okay. And your aura is this combination of gold and purple right now, and it is just really beautiful. And you've got a little crown, like those old icon pictures with the halo, you've got the gold closest and then you've got the purple.

Lily:

Oh, my goodness.

Brian:

It's in a good place. Try not to be so hard on yourself.

Lily:

Okay. Wow. That's just so amazing. I needed to hear every single word you said. Thank you so, so much.

Brian:

You are very, very welcome. But I couldn't have done it without you.

Lily:

Wow. Amazing.

Jennifer:

Thank you, Lily. That was really, really special. And it helped lots of other people too. There are people that are popping up all over the place saying, "Oh my God, that reading was for me." So thank you for bringing forward that information, Lily. It was really special.

Lily:

Thank you both so, so much.

Jennifer:

Thank you, honey.

Brian:

You're very welcome.

Jennifer:

All right. We're going to try that new thing again. If your name is Colleen, press star seven on your telephone's keypad. We've got a Colleen in Illinois and it looks like we're at the only Colleen. There's only one.

Colleen:

Yes, this is Colleen.

Jennifer:

All right. Brian, we'll let Brian start first.

Colleen:

Thank you.

Brian:

Colleen, I'm going to ask you a question. Define your parents' idea of God. For example, your mother, how would she define God? What would she say about God?

Colleen:

That there is a God, but she was not religious in any way.

Brian:

There's something here about your personal relationship with how you see God that transcends... What I heard was the traditional definition, which is why I asked about your parents. And I guess what I'm asking is, do you see God as a... This is a deep discussion. How do you see God? And then I'll ask the question.

Colleen:

I see God as my partner, and I try to talk to him all the time. I guess I have faith in him.

Brian:

Terrific. At the risk of being controversial, I'm actually going to recommend a book for you called Three Magic Words. It's by Uell Stanley Anderson. Yes, there is a partnership, but you are also empowered by the divine. And I feel like you don't see the power of the indwelling God quite yet. If there is a missing link, that's it. If there is something that's not quite there yet, it's you coming to terms with the indwelling God. Now, some people would say, "Yes, that's one's ability to manifest and make magic." To me, it's much more than that because it will key you into all the questions you have about purpose, about service, all of that. But it's connecting with the indwelling God. I'm not diminishing the partnership that you have. I'm just saying in that partnership, it's your turn to be as powerful, to get what the indwelling God brings to your life. I have to ask if you understand what I'm saying, because I kind of don't. I'm hearing it's meaningful.

Colleen:

I think I do. I have been talking to him a lot, but I feel like there's still an internal block that hasn't totally accepted how powerful I am with him, I guess. Does that make sense?

Brian:

I think you got it. I'm just asking you to acknowledge that internal power, that indwelling God. That's the best thing. I think, from an affirmation point of view, you can say, "I acknowledge and accept the indwelling God," to activate it.

Colleen:

I acknowledge and accept the indwelling God. I acknowledge and accept the indwelling God.

Brian:

Did you have a question? And by the way, notice, I heard you before we called any numbers or anything. You want to talk about power.

Colleen:

I know. That is awesome. And I think Jenn said I was number 33. And the funny thing is, all week I've been seeing the number 33, and I can remember thinking, "Oh my gosh, why do I keep seeing that number?" And I was wondering what it meant. Well, now I know.

Brian:

Well, just a sign to me, and talking about religion, when I hear the number 33 that's the year. That's how old Christ was with death and resurrection. So if 33 is popping up, it's signaling rebirth. It might mean something else to somebody else.

Colleen:

Yes. I do feel that is what's happening to me right now. A lot of things are not working out for me right now and I keep going inward because that's where the answer is. And I know that's where the answer is.

Brian:

And I think you'll be grateful that the things that didn't work out are not working out. In about a month there will be clarity on all of that.

Colleen:

Oh, good. You just answered a deep, deep, deep question for me. Because I have been questioning internally, "What's going on with me? Why isn't anything working out? I don't understand what's going on." And I know that the answers are inside me, but it's also been frustrating for me.

Brian:

If you can, let go of the frustration. I also think people who are going through what you're going through with things not working out or things seeming to fall away, somewhere in here you may have asked for a more authentic life or a more true life, true to yourself life. Those things that wouldn't match that, they wouldn't happen or they would fall away. That's how powerful you are.

Colleen:

Wow. I'm just amazed. This is awesome, and it makes so much sense. The things that I'm trying so hard to make work just aren't working.

Jennifer:

And we've got to start trusting that stuff now instead of being frustrated. Thank you for bringing that message forward, because now is the time to trust our life, to trust our soul, to trust our journey, to trust the adventure, to trust that, if it's not working out, this is something better and focusing our energy on, "Okay then, what's next?" Instead of, "What's wrong?" Well done, Colleen.

Colleen:

That is so awesome.

Jennifer:

Beautiful. Thank you so much. All right. We're going to go to caller number one. Hey, we're going to Erie, Pennsylvania. 4984, you're on the air.

Lisa:

Hi, this is Lisa.

Brian:

Hi, Lisa. So Lisa, being in the number one position, rather than me just jumping in. What's your question? If you could ask anything today, what would it be?

Lisa:

Oh, man. I was hoping that you would just start talking. I don't really want to ask it because I feel like if I got chosen, I should ask something really good.

Brian:

No, no, no. I'll tell you why I'm doing this. Yes, you might hope that I just jump in. But in your case, the prompt that I receive is no, no, no, no, no. She has to come forward with what she wants to ask, regardless of what she thinks people will think. So you get to ask the question. You don't have to be significant. I think this is a theme here. Not everything out of one's mouth has to be significant. Remember when Jenn said, "It's the little actions that add up." There's nothing that's insignificant. If you have the thought, there are no stupid or little questions. If the question comes up, then the question is valid. And I think what I'm trying to say here is that you might not place value on yourself where it already exists. The message here is valuing yourself and valuing what you have to offer without assuming what other people are going to think first and then deciding. What is your question?

Lisa:

It's an odd question, but I feel like this is my gut and what I'm going to ask is, what am I supposed to be doing now and why aren't I?

Brian:

I'm sure there are many people that have that question. When you go, "What am I supposed to be doing now?" You are giving the responsibility for that choice over to something or someone else. My question would be, "I want to know my purpose. I am open to knowing my purpose." Because purpose is not what you do in the world, purpose is the context for what you do in the world. Just to give you a short answer, you're supposed to be working on yourself now and always. That's the first 'supposed to'. You're supposed to be loving yourself, giving yourself what you need and doing the spiritual work that you are obviously doing. Otherwise, you wouldn't be on this call. That's the first thing.

Lisa:

I feel like that's what I should be doing and I want to do it, but I just get in a place where I don't want to do anything. In my head I want to do what you just said.

Brian:

The reason is because there are painful circumstances and situations and things that happen to you, and you don't want to experience that pain. Well, you're older now and you're far enough away from it that you can actually be larger than that pain. But a lot of times people don't want to take a look at themselves, at their lives, because there's this fear. And there's this self-preservation that takes over and says, "Well, I'm not going to go into the pain because I don't want to feel it again." And yet, the salvation, the understanding, the growth is in the willingness to see the circumstances or what happened and to understand who you are now in the present. And that may have been something that happened to you, but it is not who you are. It is something that happened. And it may have come to define you for a short period of time or may be defining you now.

Brian:

And by the way, the result of doing the work is always positive and will always get to the positive side. My thing is I don't want to journal because I know something's going to come out in the journaling and I always feel better after I've done it. The resistance to the work may be a resistance to remembering things that you don't want to remember, experiencing pain that you don't want to experience again, finding out a truth that you really didn't want to know, but a truth that sets you free. In my experience, and I've been doing this for 40 years, that is what keeps people from the work. I don't know, Jenn, if you want to chime in on that.

Jennifer:

Well, let's see what Lisa has to say.

Lisa:

All of that sounds... I just get teary-eyed just hearing it, even.

Jennifer:

Lisa, would you be open to just play for just a minute? Churn some new energies.

Lisa:

Yes.

Jennifer:

Okay, good. There's the energy. We're going to play just a little 'what if' game. I'm just going to check in to you to see what the words are. The rest of you play along. You play along with Lisa. Ask yourself this question from an energy and intention of play fantasy pretend. You ready?

Lisa:

Yes.

Jennifer:

What if I were whole and happy? What if I were whole and happy? What would that be like if that were true? What if I were whole and happy right now? What would that be like if that were true? Describe what it might be like if it were true. We know it's not. But if it were true, what do you think it might feel like?

Lisa:

Well, I instantly feel in my chest. I know that's not what you're asking for, I don't think. But what I'm feeling...

Jennifer:

Yes, notice that and notice your mind is giving me this dance around. That's okay. Just notice that. That's what your mind does - initial protection, immediately. Notice that. Now, let's go back to the question. In pure fantasy and play. This is not serious. This is not earth shaking. This is not world changing. This is just a little dance play. Just going to play, going to pretend. What if I were whole and happy? What would that be like if it were true? We know it's impossible, but what if it were true? What do you think that might feel like, Lisa, if it were true? Just playing. What if it were true? You're watching a movie right now and it's the movie of Lisa and whole happy. We know it's not true. It's fantasy. It's fiction. But what if it were true? What do you think that might feel like?

Jennifer:

Your mind is thinking very hard about that. Let's just say, "thank you very much, beautiful mind. I know you're trying to figure this out, but that's not what we're doing here. We're not trying to figure anything out. We're just going to play in the energy of it. Thanks very much, beautiful mind. I'm going to go over here and play and pretend and fantasize about whole and happy." What if I were whole and happy? What would that be like if that were true? Tell me what it's like.

Lisa:

I would be helping people.

Jennifer:

Just feel 'I'd be helping people', but I want you to describe to me what the energy feels like. What emotions are you having? If I were whole and happy, how would I feel? How would I feel? What would that be like? Describe that.

Lisa:

I would feel light. Like I wouldn't feel heavy.

Jennifer McLean:

Good. I want you to notice your mind immediately went to "what if it isn't?" That's okay. Notice that and say, "Thanks mind. I'm going to hang out over here in light now." Just breathe in that lightness. Whole and happy feels like light. Ah, okay. There's a little heart opening happening. So feel that light. Breathe in the light. What's that like to have that light in your conscious attention? What's that like?

Lisa:

It's freedom.

Jennifer McLean:

Breathe in the freedom. That is an actual energy that you're tapping into. Breathe that freedom in. The rest of you, whatever your words are, breathe them in. Watch them expand in your field. These are actual frequencies. Watch them expand. There you are. You're in light and freedom now. You're breathing it in. Can you feel the space that's around you?

Lisa:

Yes.

Jennifer McLean:

Good. That space now has some potency within it. And that potency is light and freedom. Is that true?

Lisa:

Yes.

Jennifer McLean:

Good. This is the frequency of whole and happy. The challenge we have of humans in our amazing soul adventure is that we often are missing templates for things because we've just simply never experienced. I never experienced safety until I did this exercise on myself. "Oh, that's what safety feels like. Oh my God. I had no idea because no one showed me. I never had an experience of it." You get to now finally create for you the template of whole and happy. That frequency is now humming through your field right now. And your job now is to grow that frequency. That will open up the space for you to see things differently, for you to attract things differently. Does that feel like that could be true?

Lisa:

Yes.

Jennifer McLean:

Yeah. Well done. Thank you, Lisa, for that. Anything to add, Brian?

Brian:

No, that's great. I do want to point out one thing that when you're a member, Jenn and I work like this a lot, I just don't do all the talking. I'll say, "Jenn, what do you think?" Or, "What do you feel?" We're sort of tag teams, so you get both of us at the same time.

Jennifer McLean:

It's fun. Thank you, Lisa, for bringing that forward. I think that was really important for a lot of people. Thank you.

Lisa:

Thank you.

Jennifer McLean:

Lisa, are you a member?

Lisa:

No.

Jennifer McLean:

Okay. Well, I hope you become one, because I think this would be a nice next step for you. Especially the live shows. There's something about a live show that has us show up. I've heard that from a lot of people. No pressure. Okay, Lisa, my love, will you pick our next person from 1 to 316.

Lisa:

300.

Jennifer McLean:

Awesome. Thank you, Lisa. We're going to Mary Ellen in Cabo.

Brian:

Good morning.

Jennifer McLean:

Good morning. Hey Mary Ellen.

Mary Ellen:

Hi.

Jennifer McLean:

Okay. I'll let Brian take over.

Mary Ellen:

Okay. Good morning.

Brian:

Hi Mary Ellen. I feel like you could read me.

Mary Ellen:

Geez.

Brian:

It's interesting because part of you really wants to be like full on in community, want to participate, but then there's this other part of you that, "I don't need any help from anybody. I'm good on my own." And I feel like in life, in the past, you may have withheld a certain amount of yourself, probably for the sake of safety. And probably for whatever reasons, you were independent, you were under yourself, very young. I don't know other than what I'm picking up on, it's kind of like a maternal grandmother, I'm not sure that people really got who you were. And so, this having to alter oneself just to belong, but not then really be a part of something, I see that as having happened. But I see this now falling away.

Brian:

I don't know if you're doing therapy. I don't know what kind of work you're doing, but the shell that was protective, you have made a determination to crack that shell and let that shell fall away and come out. And you've decided, I don't know if this is a conscious decision or coming from unconscious, but you've decided that vulnerability is going to be okay, that you are going to be fine, that having your emotion is going to be okay. That being the one who's given everyone help and assistance, that it's okay for you to ask for it. I think in the past you might have not trusted people's motives. Like you might have thought they were not genuinely interested in your wellbeing. They were only interested in themselves, so that's also something that's passing away. I feel like much more generous people coming into your life. Do you like going up in the top of mountains and getting a view?

Mary Ellen:

Yes. I love the views. Not necessarily on top of a mountain. But, yes. Anything nature wise.

Brian:

Yes. I think that would help. You might have heard me telling an earlier caller to go get some silk. I think I'm getting this 10,000 foot perspective, literally meditating at the top of the mountain, and saying, "You know what? When I descend the mountain, it will be all about the choices that I make, that I have the right to choose, that I have the right to choose even my feelings. Even if I have to go off and have my feelings in a separate room, I'm going to have my feelings. I'm going to choose every aspect of myself to be," I guess the old psychological term is, "fully actualized."

Brian:

I think one of the gifts that you have is also a curse, which is your level of intelligence. You can figure something out. As a matter of fact, what most people don't or can't, or won't figure out, you consider to be common sense. When you don't understand why somebody doesn't get something and your thought is, "My God, that is common sense. How can they be so stupid?" But your perspective, your mind is very sharp and your analytical skills are very sharp and they're so sharp that sometimes you might actually outsmart yourself.

Brian:

From your perspective, sometimes not thinking is good. Don't think too hard, don't analyze it too much. How do you feel? That would be where I would go to, "How do I feel?" Rather than, "What do I think?"

Mary Ellen:

Okay.

Brian:

What do you do for a living? Were you in sciences or math or something like that?

Mary Ellen:

No, no. I was in office work and in the movie business.

Brian:

I never would've gotten that. Because you are someone I would rely on to get something done. Because you will devise a system to get something done. Yes. You're incredibly reliable. Just the way you organize things. It's great. Yes. I would hire you in a minute because you get things done. Do you have a question?

Mary Ellen:

No. My only comment was, I think on a subconscious level, that this was the year that I was just going to go for it and just come out of the shadows.

Brian:

Yep. You got it.

Mary Ellen:

Yay.

Jennifer McLean:

You gave yourself your own reading. Brian nailed it.

Mary Ellen:

Yes, indeed.

Brian:

You know what? I don't often do this. I know my email address is on the page. If you could mark your calendar for April 9th.

Mary Ellen:

Okay.

Brian:

And just send me an email and tell me how you are, because I'm really curious.

Mary Ellen:

Okay.

Brian:

That would be great.

Mary Ellen:

I'd love to, I'd love to. Yes, that is very cool.

Jennifer McLean:

Awesome, Mary Ellen. So amazing.

Mary Ellen:

Thank you.

Jennifer McLean:

Thank you, love. If you would like to have a reading with Brian Seth Hurst, it's another one of those first come first served things. He is offering a special on his readings. Go to www.predictionsweek.com/brians-2022-offer.

Jennifer McLean:

He's giving you a 25% discount. It's huge. Imagine partnering with this amazing guy and you heard his intelligence and his strategic nature. Combine that with his incredible intuitive nature. And you've got a really powerful coach. And his RISE! program helps you rise beyond your beliefs, beyond your old patterns, beyond the old seeming obstacles and habits and move forward on purpose. And he's talked about purpose today. Manifesting the life you're born to. He has worked with people who have big projects like books and businesses, etc. But he can work with you on anything. RISE! is an intensive accountability program delivered in five one on one highly professional, highly personalized, I should say, sessions that produce clarity, define and solidify your commitment and create your unique roadmap to actually fulfilling your mission. He's giving a 10% off standard rates. There's a code there that you can use. ZJ25C if you're in the States. And then again, use that same email, briansethhurst@hotmail.com. And he's giving you special pricing. put that in the email, that code ZJ25C, and those are capital letters.

Jennifer McLean:

If you want a reading, he fills up between now and the spring a lot from Predictions Week. All members get this special offer indefinitely. Then you could also get his amazing book, Whole. This is a beautiful book. What do you do after life has handed you a wake-up call? How do you reconcile everything that's happened, that's happening in your life with the one you truly want? The good, the bad, the joy, the hurt, the wins, the losses. All those parts form the experience of your life and your identity.

Jennifer McLean:

Whole literally answers the question of "What was I thinking?" Whole allows you to make sense of the pieces of your life as part of the greater being that is you. Whole presents you with the opportunity to reconcile the past, arrive holy connected in the present and create your future. There's a little button there where you can get 50% off the book Whole by Brian Seth Hurst. And then there's also a link here for Brian's mailing list. And if you want something really fun, Brian is an amazing chef and he has a little cooking show, a cooking channel on YouTube called the Happenstance Chef. There's a little link there for you to join his amazing shows. I learn something every time Brian cooks. Brian, what do you have to say about all that?

Brian:

Well, the first thing I want to say is thank you so much, Jenn, for having me and giving me the opportunity to participate. I love this. The great thing about serving, is that you have to set everything else aside in your life to do it. It doesn't matter what you're going through. It doesn't matter what you have to do to be truly present and to serve. It makes you whole, so thank you so much for that opportunity. I also want to say I don't have a personal assistant. I book all the readings myself, and although many of you on this call may think I'm a little nuts, I am leaving on a much needed cruise vacation tomorrow at noon, and I will be gone until the 19th. I will have internet on the ship. I will try to get to all of your emails to answer, but just know that I'm getting them.

Brian:

And there will be some delay in me booking your sessions, but just know it's been my experience and experience of clients that a reading happens at the absolutely perfect time.

Jennifer McLean:

Indeed.

Brian:

As far as the cooking channel, Jenn, well, we're going to get back to shooting that. I love doing that. That is something I do because I love. And if you find the other channel, which is just Brian Seth Hurst, youtube.com/briansethhurst, I think, that is where I am putting the singing, Jenn.

Jennifer McLean:

Oh yes, the singing.

Brian:

I've returned to singing after 37 years. And I'm singing on the ship. But what I wanted to say is, the pandemic gave me the opportunity to do the things I love, which was cooking and singing. And I thought, "How sad that I had to wait for this to discover and do the things I love?" Because maybe I didn't think I had enough time. Well, now I'm making the time. Even though I'm like fully back to work, I'm making the time for the things that I love. I'm not saying, "Someday, when I, maybe I." I'm doing the things I love now. And I certainly encourage everyone else to decide what those are and to make the time to do it. It will enrich your soul.

Jennifer McLean:

Amen to that. Beautiful. Thank you, Brian.

Brian:

Please put your time zone and the length of session in the subject line. It helps me tremendously because I do a spreadsheet, so I'd appreciate it.

Jennifer McLean:

So time zone and length of session. If you could put that in your email, that would be awesome. Someone keeps asking about the book you recommended. It's called Three Magic Words. It's by Uell Stanley Anderson. Three Magic Words. Okay. Well awesome, Brian. Thank you so much for being part of the magic that is MasterWorks Healing. Thank you for bringing your gifts and your brilliance. We so appreciate you.

Brian:

I just want to tell you how much I love you and how happy I am to be here and acknowledge what a great space you create for healing and community. Thank you so much.

Jennifer McLean:

Oh, thank you, Brian. I'm receiving that deeply. Thank you. That's a wrap for now. session one and we have two more sessions today. Join us at 1:00 PM Pacific time. It's about 90 minutes from now with the amazing Dee Wallace. Oh my God. You guys are in for such a treat. I keep saying that because every single contributor is a treat. Dee Wallace is also a very well-known actress. She played the mother in the movie, E.T. and she is hilarious and fun and incredibly profoundly gifted. She's going to bring the channel through for us today in really profound ways. And Dee always gives some really fascinating predictions.

Jennifer McLean:

You'll definitely want to catch that show. And then, of course, the finale today is with yours truly, Jennifer McLean. So I'll be here at 3:00 PM Pacific time. That's 6:00 PM Eastern time and I'll be doing psychic readings. I do my speed reading where you actually put in the form there one or two sentences that you'd like some help with. And I zip through them to get to as many as possible. I'll be doing that tonight. And I'll also be doing regular opening the lines for readings.

Jennifer McLean:

There's always healing because that's what I do. I'm a vibrational energy medicine healer, so there will be vibrational energy medicine healing. And I'm also launching the 2022 soul song of the year that is infused with the energies of this year. I'll be sharing that with you all and they're telling me we're also going to do an STT session. So we'll see. That's STT, a Spontaneous Transformation Technique, which is my system of healing. That'll be the finale for predictions week at 3:00 PM today. Join us, go have some lunch or breakfast and I will see you in about 90 minutes for Dee Wallace. Thank you, Brian. Goodnight, everyone, or good day everyone.

Brian:

You're welcome. Bye.

Jennifer McLean:

Bye now.
